“ Even though i did not see him for a couple of mounts until that last saturday before my grandpa Sunny died i felt like a lucky girl because i knew God would take care of him and make him happy and every night there are two stars in the sky perfectly in line i call those stars grandpa R and grandpa Sunny so i know that grandpa Sunny is telling grandpa R all about last 8 years of being with me and telling him what i am up to these days so he can here about the time he's missed so i know he is in the best place he can be and that makes me happier than anythings because he s not suffering anymore

“ I will always remember the loving and caring man that never let me get away without a hug, and who always called me "ornery". I always apprcaited you both coming to support me at my games and cheering me on. You will always be one of the most generous and caring couple I've ever known.

“ I wanted to share some memories I cherish to this day: Brusha-Brusha-Brusha meant "perfection" when painting fence posts/rails around the fields/property during slave days. Oh what fun AND work. But everytime I drove past your home on my way to my grandparents I took great pride in saying I helped paint those fence posts!

I learned prior to our first Homecoming stand that "poched" peanuts was Sonny's version of Oklahoma's "parched" peanuts.

And finally, a memory that always brings a smile to my heart - during my senior year of high school, I would often wear a short wig. One Sunday, I went running up the steps from the basement when I tripped on the top step just as the door opened. There stood Sonny and there I stood holding my wig that flown off my head when I tripped. He never said a word and I quickly walked out the door so mortified.

I will always remember Sonny as a true gentleman as well as a gentle man. I am so blessed for having known both Sonney and Shirley Cummings. Thank you for such fond memories. Judy “ Shirley, we are very sorry for your loss. We treasure the memory of the kind smile he always had when we would visit.

We want you to know that we appreciate both Hudson and you, Shirley. You both showed such great kindness and friendship to Lester and Eunice. The love, concern, encouragement and friendship you both showed to Karen is a great example of a wonderful Christian couple.
